Mama Shelter is the achievement of a dream that little by little became a place. It's the dream of a tribe (Serge, Benjamin, Jérémie Trigano, Cyril Auizerate and Philippe Starck) that gathered around the same desire of creating a different place, so they could meet somewhere that was just like them, and enabled them to welcome the others on their own way.

It was also the desire of innovating with a place that could surprise and exist thanks to the vibes of a district, the energies of its inhabitants, of a city and its travelers.

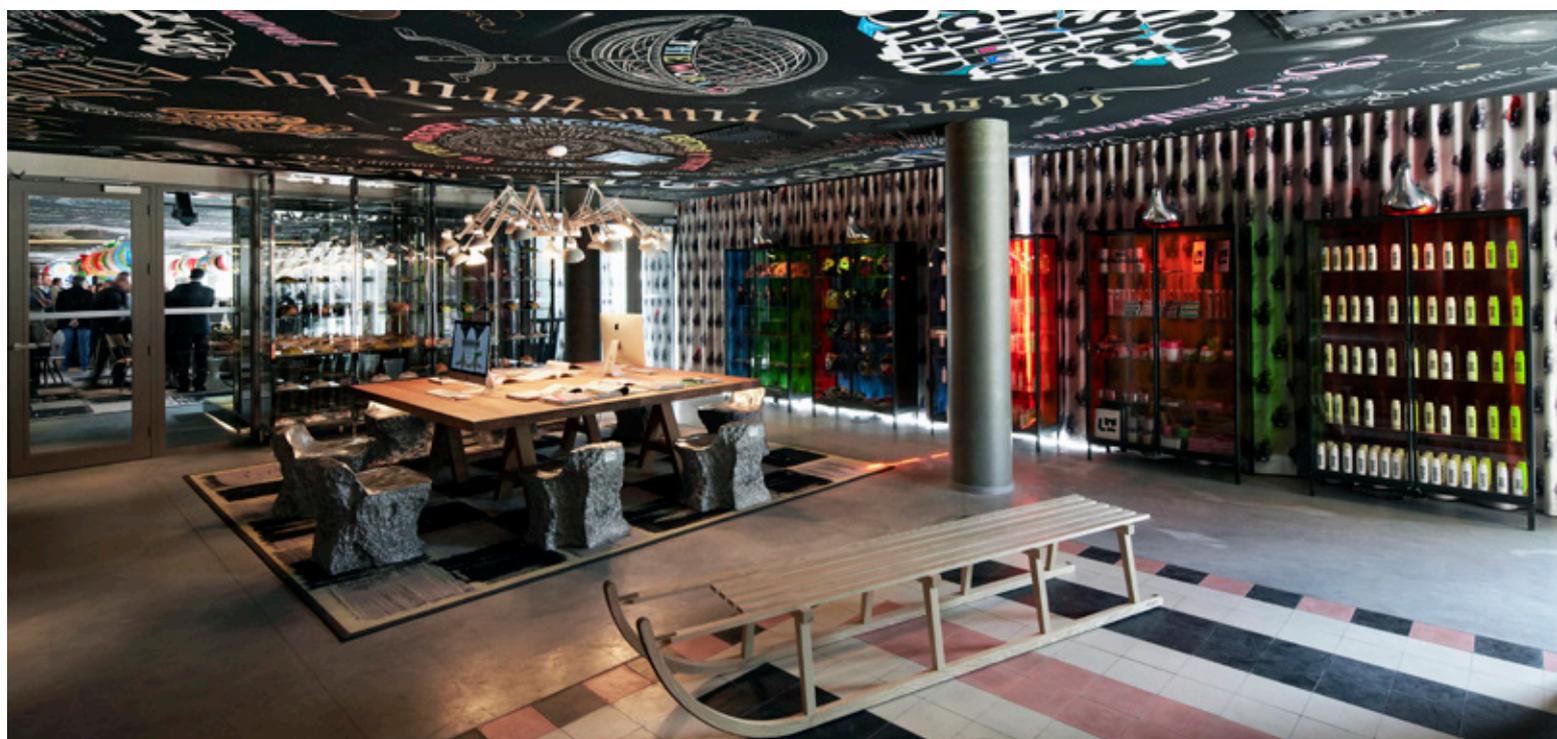

And the dream of creating a unique, atypical, romantic, and participative place that is not exactly a hotel, but more of an "urban kibbutz" made of meetings, freedom, fizz, senses and emotions.

After Paris, Marseille and Istanbul, the founders decided to settle down in Lyon.

The MAMA SHELTER is at the crossroads of three paths: Gerland with its industries making of Lyon an international city of progress, the university "Lumières" just near the quays that keeps the memory of the former minds, and sculpt the new ones, and the Guillotière, the land of diversity and immigration where everyone gathers around the Djibrail BAHADOURIAN square.

Its entrance faces a fenced basketball court suggesting an urban territory, a little "something" of New York, or more exactly of Brooklyn.

The Mama Shelter Lyon has been perceived with the same semantics as the other Mamas: large tables, a cocktails bar perfect for new meetings, an open kitchen to participate in the culinary magic, bright and comfortable rooms to help the quiet dreams. As in every Mama, Philippe Starck integrated local references: the texts about the speaking from Lyon (les gones), the sofas' fabric designed with lions, wall hangings covered with chickens.
