

Light up

Philippe Starck's Camomille lamp for Kartell adds a playful yet sophisticated touch to any interior.

Finding inspiration in the soft curves of a teapot, the French industrial designer worked with Kartell to create a user-friendly, versatile piece that suits a wide range of tastes and settings. Whether placed in a cosy corner at home or lighting up vibrant public spaces like cafes, its simple form and soft hues create a welcoming atmosphere.

The lamp's striking silhouette features a slim handle and is crafted from recycled thermoplastic technopolymer, available in an array of eye-catching finishes.

Defined by a confident palette that ranges from Bordeaux, Champagne and Petrol, among others, Camomille complements various decor styles.

Featuring battery-powered

ABOVE Camomille comes in six different colourways and finishes to suit various tastes and styles functionality, integrated LED and touch-sensitive dimming, Camomille also boasts an impressive battery life of 50-200 hours (depending on brightness setting and use). What's more, the lamp's portability ensures it can be easily moved to wherever light is needed, making it perfect for both modern homes and public spaces.

Users can place it on a dining table, position it in a hotel lobby, or showcase it as a statement piece in a lounge, where Camomille effortlessly adds warmth and elegance to its surroundings.

With its minimalist silhouette and vibrant colours, the lamp is ideal for those in search of both a practical lighting solution and a statement design piece that promises to make a lasting impression. kartell.com

BELOW For the design, Philippe Starck was inspired by the soft curves of a teapot

BELOW The lamp boasts an impressive battery life of 50-200 hours

